MECHEL ANNOUNCES THE COMMISSIONING OF THE NEW COKE BATTERY AT CHELYABINSK METALLURGICAL PLANT

Chelyabinsk, Russia November 9, 2006, Mechel OAO (NYSE: MTL) today announced the commissioning of a new coke battery at its subsidiary, Chelyabinsk Metallurgical Plant. Annual coke output at CMP will increase by approximately 500 thousand tonnes once the new coke battery's full capacity is achieved.

The new coke battery has been commissioned at Mechel's Chelyabinsk Metallurgical Plant subsidiary. The project, which cost a total of US$40 million, is implemented in line with Mechel's strategy targeted at strengthening its mining segment, increasing its coking coal mining and sales volumes, and building its share on the raw materials market.

The new coke battery output is primarily intended for producing commodity coke as well as for the needs of Mechel's subsidiary, Southern Urals Nickel Plant. The battery's production capacity is approximately 500 thousand tonnes of coke annually. The coke output at Chelyabinsk Metallurgical Plant was 1,663 thousand tonnes for the 9 months of 2006 and 2,589 thousand tonnes for the full year 2005.

The coke market was low this year, which enabled us to perform a complete overhaul of the main coke facilities at Chelyabinsk Metallurgical Plant smoothly though this led to a certain decrease in output, said Mechel's Chief Operating Officer Alexey Ivanushkin.

However, next year we expect the coke market to recover and we are prepared to be an active player. The output of the new coke battery at CMP is primarily intended for sale to third parties. At the same time, to further strengthen our standing, we acquired a controlling stake in one of the major coke producers in Russia, Moscow Coke and Gas Plant OAO, in October.
