CAMTEK LTD.

On March 15, 2017, Rudolph Technologies Inc. ("Rudolph") filed an amended complaint in its long-running litigation against Camtek Ltd. (the "Company") relating to the alleged infringement of Rudolph's U.S. Patent 7,779,528 (the "'528 Patent") by the Company's Condor and Gannet inspection products. Such litigation had been stayed since 2011 pending the outcome of the patent validity reexamination proceedings in the U.S. Patent Office initiated by the Company, which were recently concluded, by the affirmation by the Federal Circuit of the invalidity of 15 out of the 18 '528 Patent claims reexamined. Following such affirmation of invalidity of 15 out of the 18 claims, the stay was not renewed in March 2017, and the aforementioned amended complaint was filed. In the amended complaint, Rudolph alleges that the Company's Condor, Gannet, Falcon and Eagle inspection products sold in the United States infringe various claims of the '528 Patent, and also alleges that that the Company's Condor and Gannet inspection products sold in the United States infringe various claims of Rudolph's U.S. Patent No. 6,826,298 (the "'298 Patent"). Rudolph is also requesting to recover certain damages for some of the Company's Falcon inspection products which Rudolph alleges it was not able to recover in the previous '298 Patent case. The Company believes that it has good defenses to the allegations set forth in the amended complaint, and intends to vigorously defend the matter.
