NEW YORK COMMUNITY BANCORP, INC.

TO ACQUIRE ATLANTIC BANK OF NEW YORK

Transaction Highlights

Immediately accretive to both GAAP and cash earnings

Improves NYB's interest rate risk profile by replacing wholesale funding with low-cost core deposits

Features superior deal metrics

Enhances NYB's balance sheet and franchise

Builds on the foundation provided by Long Island Commercial Bank for the establishment of New York Commercial Bank

Westbury, N.Y., October 11, 2005 New York Community Bancorp, Inc. (NYSE: NYB) and the National Bank of Greece (NYSE: NBG) today announced the signing of a definitive agreement under which New York Community Bancorp, Inc. (NYB) will acquire Atlantic Bank of New York (Atlantic), a wholly-owned U.S. subsidiary of the National Bank of Greece (NBG). Headquartered in Manhattan, Atlantic is a full-service commercial bank with assets of $3.0 billion, deposits of $1.8 billion, and 17 branches in Manhattan, Queens, Brooklyn, and Nassau and Westchester Counties, at June 30, 2005.

Under the terms of the agreement, which has been unanimously approved by the relevant Boards of Directors, NYB will pay $400 million for Atlantic in an all-cash transaction, representing 181% of Atlantic's tangible equity at June 30, 2005. The transaction is expected to close in the first quarter of 2006, pending regulatory approval, and to be immediately accretive to NYB's GAAP and cash earnings per share.

In addition, NYB announced that it expects to enhance the quality of the earnings stream of the combined company by liquidating $1.3 billion of securities and utilizing the proceeds to reduce the level of wholesale funding. By replacing wholesale funding with low-cost core deposits, NYB expects to further strengthen its interest rate risk profile and improve its net interest margin.

Upon completion of the transaction, Atlantic will operate as a division of New York Commercial Bank, the commercial bank subsidiary of NYB to be established in connection with NYB's pending acquisition of Long Island Financial Corp. (Nasdaq: LICB) (LICB), the holding company for Long Island Commercial Bank, announced on August 1st. The LICB transaction is expected to close in the fourth quarter of 2005, pending regulatory approval and the approval of LICB's shareholders at a special meeting to be held on November 16, 2005.

Including the assets and deposits to be acquired in the Atlantic and LICB transactions, NYB is expected to have total assets of approximately $27.0 billion, total deposits of approximately $13.4 billion, and a ratio of securities to total assets of approximately 19%.

Commenting on the prospective acquisition of Atlantic, NYB President and Chief Executive Officer Joseph R. Ficalora stated, "Atlantic Bank's superb reputation as a depository institution and as a lender to small and mid-sized businesses throughout the New York metropolitan region strengthens the foundation provided by Long Island Commercial for the franchise that will be New York Commercial Bank. In addition to supporting our strategic focus on growing commercial deposits and services, the transaction with Atlantic will give us a presence in Manhattan, while enhancing our commercial bank presence throughout our marketplace.

In addition, we are very pleased that the National Bank of Greece has expressed an interest in maintaining a business relationship with Atlantic following the close of the transaction, Mr. Ficalora said.

Like LICB, Atlantic Bank is very rich in core deposits, which accounted for $1.5 billion, or 77% of its total deposits, at June 30, 2005, with an average cost of 1.25%. We look forward to extending the Bank's outstanding record of customer service, Mr. Ficalora noted, which earned top marks in a recent survey of Manhattan-based branches of several competing banks. As a result of these two transactions, New York Commercial Bank will have at least 29 branches serving consumers and businesses in the coveted New York metropolitan region by the end of the first quarter of 2006. In addition, we are considering transitioning some of our divisional bank branches to the New York Commercial Bank subsidiary.

The diversity and quality of Atlantic's solid loan portfolio are also very appealing, Mr. Ficalora added, and will blend nicely with the mix of loans we'll acquire with LICB. At the end of June, Atlantic Bank had $1.3 billion in loans outstanding and, at 3.37%, a net interest margin that has widened 12 basis points since the Fed starting raising rates at the end of June 2004.

Our efforts in the commercial lending arena will build on the considerable expertise available at LICB and Atlantic, and will be spearheaded by Dennis D. Jurs, a senior commercial lending officer with 30 years' experience, who will be joining LICB from Citibank later on this week. Mr. Jurs spent 22 years at European American Bank, where he served as Executive Vice President and Manager of the Corporate Banking Department, before joining Citibank as Executive Vice President in charge of Middle Market Banking in 2001. Upon completion of the LICB transaction, Dennis will serve as Chief Lending Officer of New York Commercial Bank, Mr. Ficalora said.

Thomas M. O'Brien, President and Chief Executive Officer of Atlantic Bank, stated, "The addition of Atlantic Bank to the New York Community Bancorp family is a very positive move forward for both companies. The combination of Atlantic's commercial banking muscle with New York Community's expanded retail distribution results in a very dynamic and formidable competitive force. We are pleased with the growth prospects presented by this transaction, and excited about the expanded array of financial solutions it will afford to both companies' consumer and commercial clients.

Bear, Stearns & Co. Inc. and Citigroup Global Markets represented NYB in the transaction; Sullivan & Cromwell LLP served as legal counsel to NYB. NBG was represented by Morgan Stanley and Sandler O'Neill & Partners LP, with Shearman & Sterling LLP and Thacher Proffitt & Wood LLP serving as legal counsel.
