Summarized Analysis of Adjusted Income

Adjusted Net Income and Profitability

In the first quarter of 2012, Bradesco posted adjusted net income of R$2,845 million, up 2.7%, or R$74 million, from the previous quarter, mainly driven by: (i) growth in the financial margin, as a result of greater revenue from interest and non-interest portion; (ii) greater fee and commission income; (iii) lower personnel and administrative expenses; offset by: (iv) an increase in the allowance for loan losses; and (v) an increase in other operating expenses (net of other operating income).

In comparison with the same quarter a year earlier, adjusted net income increased by R$107 million, or 3.9% in the first quarter of 2012, for Return on Average Shareholders' Equity (ROAE) of 21.4%. The main reasons for this result are described below, in the analysis of the main items included in the income statement.

Shareholders' Equity stood at R$58,060 million in March 2012, up 13.2% on the balance in March 2011. The Capital Adequacy Ratio stood at 15.0%, 12.0% of which fell under Tier I Reference Shareholders' Equity.

Total Assets came to R$789,550 million in March 2012, up 16.9% over March 2011, driven by the increase in operations and the expansion of business volume. Return on Average Assets (ROAA) reached 1.5%.

Efficiency Ratio (ER)

The Efficiency Ratio in the last 12 months⁽¹⁾ improved by 0.3 p.p. over the previous quarter, reaching 42.7% in the first quarter of 2012. With regards to the quarterly ER, the indicator went from 45.1% in the fourth quarter of 2011 to 40.8% in the first quarter of 2012. The improvement in the ER was mainly driven by: (i) a decrease in personnel expenses, mainly resulting from the concentration of holidays in the quarter and lower expenses with management and employee profit sharing; (ii) lower administrative expenses, mainly due to the stabilization of expenses related to the expansion of new Service Points, in addition to the decrease in marketing and advertising expenses and those with outsourced services in the period; and (iii) growth in the financial margin and fee and commission income, which was mainly due to an increase in average business volume, resulting from accelerated organic growth, which began in the second half of 2011, and lower treasury gains.

The “adjusted to risk” ER, which reflects the impact of risk associated with loan operations⁽²⁾, reached 52.6% in the first quarter of 2012, a 0.4 p.p. improvement over the previous quarter. This was mainly the result of the aforementioned events, offset by an increase in delinquency ratio in the period.

(1) $ER = (\text{Personnel Expenses} - \text{Employee Profit Sharing} + \text{Administrative Expenses}) / (\text{Financial Margin} + \text{Fee and Commission Income} + \text{Income from Insurance} + \text{Equity in the Earnings (Losses) of Unconsolidated Companies} + \text{Other Operating Income} - \text{Other Operating Expenses})$. Considering the ratio between: (i) total administrative costs (Personnel Expenses + Administrative Expenses + Other Operating Expenses + Tax Expenses not related to revenue generation + Insurance Selling Expenses) and (ii) revenue net of related taxes (not considering Claims and Selling Expenses from the Insurance Group), our ER in the first quarter of 2012 would be 44.6%; and

(2) Including ALL expenses, adjusted for granted discounts, loan recovery and sale of foreclosed assets, among others.

Economic Outlook

Economic activity indicators in the USA continued to present better-than-expected results in the first quarter of 2012, but failed to completely ward off uncertainties regarding the pace and sustainability of growth in the coming months. At the same time, doubts regarding the speed of Chinese growth led to a measure of discomfort, compounded by persistent uncertainties surrounding the country's banking system and real estate market.

Furthermore, fears of a financial meltdown in the eurozone were assuaged by the European Central Bank's recent measures to promote liquidity in the region's banking system - while renegotiation of Greek sovereign debt appears to successfully prevent the country from leaving the European monetary union.

Faced with these risks, global growth remained low, adversely impacting the confidence of the economic agents. This trend has had two relevant effects: (i) the normalization of monetary policy by the main central banks will most likely be delayed, ensuring high international liquidity; and (ii) average commodity prices should also continue on a downward trajectory throughout 2012 thanks to the global deceleration tendency, despite short-term pressures, especially in relation to agricultural produce (unfavorable weather conditions) and oil (geopolitical tensions).

At the same time, despite the substantially reduced risk of a new global crisis in the financial sector, Brazil is still not immune to global events, although it is certainly much better prepared to face the materialization of existing risks than it was in 2008. Faced with a deteriorating international scenario and the current leveling off of domestic activity in the second half of 2011, the economic authorities have adopted a number of stimulus measures, including: (i) a series of interest rate reductions, which continued into the first quarter of 2012 and should advance in the current period; (ii) the partial reversal of the macroprudential measures adopted in December 2010; (iii) tax incentives for the and industrial segments; and (iv) interventions in the exchange market to aid industry, which is facing stiff foreign competition and a strong loss of demand. With these measures and the expected increase in public investments, the Brazilian economy should respond favorably, accelerating the pace of growth in the coming months. This improvement should become even more evident in the quarter, when the industrial inventory adjustments will have run their course.

Although the prospective global scenario should have a deflationary impact on Brazil's economy, there are still a number of challenges related to the handling of monetary policy, given the mismatch between supply and demand, the economy's high level of indexation and the buoyant job market.

Bradesco is maintaining its positive long-term outlook for Brazil. Despite the country's undeniable export vocation, domestic demand has been and will continue to be the main engine of economic performance. Household consumption has been driven by the buoyant job market, while investments have benefited from the opportunities generated by pre-salt oil exploration and the sporting events in the coming years. With no signs of excessive income commitment by borrowers and with continuing upward social mobility, the outlook for the Brazilian banking system also remains favorable.

The Organization continues to believe that Brazil will achieve a higher potential growth pace more rapidly if fueled by bigger investments in education and infrastructure and by economic reforms that increase the efficiency of the productive sector. Action on these fronts would play a crucial role in giving the private sector a more solid foundation in regard to facing global competition and continuing to grow and create jobs.
