CRYPTOLOGIC EXPECTS TO DELIVER NET INCOME OF $9-$10 MILLION IN 2009

Branded e-gaming software pioneer on track with new growth strategy to generate cash, reduce costs and deliver profits from expanding its casino business

January 15, 2009 (Dublin, IRELAND) CryptoLogic, a world leader in Internet casino and branded gaming software, today provided an update on its new growth strategy and restructuring program that positions the company for a return to profitability and cash generation in 2009, and further growth in the years to come.

Highlights

Restructuring program

Under the plan announced in October 2008, the company is on track to achieve:

Reduced total operating costs of approximately $13 million on an annualized basis by the end of Q2 2009.

Restructuring to result in $3.5 million cash costs and up to $20 million in further non-cash charges.

Outsourcing of poker network through strategic partnership with GTECH Corporation to be completed by the end of Q1 2009. Partnership will improve poker-room liquidity for CryptoLogic customers, while eliminating the costs of operating a standalone network.

Rationalization includes reconfiguration of network, a 75% reduction in servers and office rental costs.

New strategy for growth

Growth to be driven by Internet casino business, and by development and licensing of branded online games to leading gaming and entertainment brands.

Recently contracted customers including 888.com, PartyGaming and GigaMedia expected to generate new revenues of at least $8 million in 2009.

Continued aggressive expansion of casino business through licensing contracts, with a robust new business pipeline for 2009.

Edgar Filing: CRYPTOLOGIC LTD - Form 6-K

Yesterday signed a new licensing contract with Gaming Technology Solutions plc, whose customers include Unibet, bwin and many other top brands.

2009 outlook

Based on no significant further deterioration in economic conditions and stabilization of currency rates, the company expects:

Return to profitability and cash generation from Q2 2009.

Full year cash generation post restructuring of $11-$13 million.

Net profits in the range of $9-$10 million.

Diluted earnings per share of 65-71 cents.

CryptoLogic has taken radical steps to focus on its core strengths as a developer of exciting online gaming content, said Brian Hadfield, CryptoLogic's President & CEO. We are on track to return to profitability and generate cash from the second quarter of 2009.

Our streamlined operations, lower operating costs and commitment to creating compelling customer experience, together with a highly profitable build-once-sell-often model, provides a solid springboard for long-term growth and shareholder value.

Overview

CryptoLogic is making significant progress in executing its new growth strategy and restructuring program, first outlined in October 2008. These plans were developed after a fundamental review of the business by the company's management under Brian Hadfield, following his appointment as President & CEO at the end of February 2008.

This new strategy is to achieve long-term growth, sustained profitability and strong cash generation by adopting a radically new business model that focuses on CryptoLogic's successful Internet casino business and the development and licensing of the company's highly acclaimed software.

Restructuring for profitability

As announced previously, the company is implementing a plan to reduce annual operating costs by $13 million through various initiatives. Approximately $8.5 million of the savings are attributable to a reduction in employee expenses; about $2.5 million are from infrastructure and facilities downsizing; and some $2.0 million in savings are expected from operational efficiencies across the business.

Poker partnership cuts costs, adds liquidity

In November 2008, the company announced the outsourcing of its hosted poker business by entering into a strategic partnership with GTECH Corporation's International Poker Network. The move gives CryptoLogic's poker licensees and players access to a larger network with a combined average of 15,000 active players.

The transfer of poker licensees and systems to the GTECH network is expected to be completed by the end of the first quarter. The company will continue to provide a full-service offering for its licensees through the GTECH network and receive ongoing revenues from its transferred customers.

New customers to drive revenue growth

CryptoLogic significantly increased its customer acquisition activities in 2008, resulting in 10 new contracts for both hosted Internet casinos and the licensing of branded games. Yesterday the company further expanded its channel to market with a strategic partnership with Gaming Technology Solutions plc, a leading global supplier of platform solutions for online gaming operations. Under the agreement, CryptoLogic's top performing games will be made available to GTS customers, which include Unibet, bwin, Expekt and Betclick among many other top brands.

Going forward, the build-once-license-often model offers excellent revenue potential at low cost and will be the major driver of growth. The company's new customers include 888.com, PartyGaming, GigaMedia, SkyBet (part of BskyB Group), Orbis, The Poker Channel and Betjacks. These agreements offer significant revenue potential for 2009 and beyond.

Investing for future

In order to leverage its industry leadership in the development and deployment of casino games, the company is introducing the CryptoLogic Centre for Innovation where customers, partners, universities and others can participate in defining and guiding the future of e-gaming.

As part of the new strategy and image, the company will also unveil its new branding program and logo based around extraordinary e-gaming innovation with the production of the new annual report due in May.

Outlook

The company is in the process of finalizing its results for the fourth quarter and full year 2008. While trading levels were broadly in line with management expectations in the fourth quarter, revenues were affected by the continued strengthening of the US dollar, the company's reporting currency, against the Euro, Canadian dollar and the British pound. As a result, reported revenues are expected to be approximately 14% lower than the previous quarter. Against that, recurring operating expenses will also be lower due to currency fluctuations. Net cash at the year end was between $42-$43 million.

Given difficult global economic conditions, the company is taking a cautious view of top line growth in 2009. Nevertheless, CryptoLogic's actions to reduce operating costs and execute its new growth strategy will enable the company to return to profitability and cash generation from Q2 2009. In addition, the company expects full year cash generation post restructuring of $11-$13 million, net profits in the range of $9-$10 million, and diluted earnings per share of 65-71 cents. The above guidance assumes no significant further deterioration in economic conditions and stabilization of currency rates.
