On May 22, 2014, Starboard Value LP issued the following press release.

STARBOARD NOMINATES SLATE OF TWELVE HIGHLY QUALIFIED DIRECTOR CANDIDATES FOR ELECTION AT DARDEN’S 2014 ANNUAL MEETING

Delivers Open Letter to Darden Shareholders

Expresses Dismay that the Board Has Essentially “Given Away” Red Lobster in a Value-Destructive Transaction without Shareholder Approval

Condemns Board for Blatantly Ignoring Special Meeting Request, Violating a Clear Shareholder Directive, and Disenfranchising Shareholders

Reiterates Commitment to its Investment in Darden and Has Identified Significant Opportunities to Unlock Substantial Value at Darden

Believes Wholesale Board Change is Required to Reverse the Years of Poor Performance, Poor Governance and Shareholder Value Destruction

Has Carefully Selected a Slate of Director Candidates Who Bring Decades of Restaurant Experience, a Proven Ability to Execute, Financial Acumen, and a Commitment to Respect and Represent the Best Interests of All Shareholders

NEW YORK, May 22, 2014 -- Starboard Value LP (together with its affiliates, “Starboard”), one of the largest shareholders of Darden Restaurants, Inc. (“Darden” or the “Company”) (NYSE: DRI), with an ownership interest of approximately 6.2% in the Company, today announced that it has delivered an open letter to shareholders of the Company, and has nominated a slate of twelve highly qualified candidates for election to the Board of Directors of the Company at the 2014 Annual Meeting of Shareholders.

The full text of the open letter to shareholders is available for viewing at the following link: <http://tinyurl.com/OpenLettertoDardenShareholders>.

Below are some highlights from Starboard’s letter:

On the value destruction from the Red Lobster Sale:

“On May 16, 2014, Darden announced the Red Lobster Sale, in which Darden’s Red Lobster operating business and real estate assets would be sold to Golden Gate Capital (“Golden Gate”) for gross proceeds of approximately $2.1 billion and net proceeds of $1.6 billion, after taxes. Golden Gate concurrently signed an agreement to sell Red Lobster’s real estate to American Realty Capital Properties, Inc. (“ARCP”) for $1.5 billion, so their actual purchase price for the Red Lobster operating business is just $600 million. More concerning for Darden shareholders, however, is that because of the tax-inefficient manner in which the transaction was structured, the net proceeds to Darden of $1.6 billion, less the $1.5 billion of real estate value that we believe could have been realized by Darden tax-free, means that the value received for Red Lobster’s operating business was a paltry $100 million, or less than 1x EBITDA.”

“While Darden has claimed that the transaction multiple for the Red Lobster Sale is 9x EBITDA, this is a gross distortion of the facts. Darden’s highly misleading press release and investor presentation released on May 16, 2014 (the “Red Lobster Sale Presentation”) are only a thinly veiled attempt to confuse shareholders regarding the true economics of the transaction. As discussed above, the value that Darden is actually receiving for Red Lobster’s operating business, net of taxes, is only $100 million, or less than 1x EBITDA. Further, as we demonstrate below, the price paid by Golden Gate represents, at best, only approximately 5.4x EBITDA for the operating business of Red Lobster (the multiple Darden receives is significantly lower than the multiple Golden Gate pays because of taxes). Additionally, these multiples are on trough EBITDA, giving no credit to a potential turnaround in the business or an expected improvement in shrimp prices. The fact that the Company would refer to this deal as being done at 9x EBITDA demonstrates management and the Board’s fundamental lack of understanding of the assets they sold and a predilection for misleading shareholders.”

On how the Board’s failure to call the Special Meeting in a timely manner is an egregious act of shareholder disenfranchisement:

“Darden claims that it did not hold the Special Meeting or agree to make the transaction subject to approval because bidders told them this would add uncertainty to the transaction process. This excuse is not even remotely credible, as explained by the New York Times on May 20, 2014, “Darden also contends that it asked the buyer, Golden Gate Capital, for a shareholder vote on the sale, but that it refused. That position is laughable, of course, because Golden Gate would obviously decline such a vote unless Darden demanded it.”

“...a significant majority of shareholders joined with us in demanding the Special Meeting be called, which should have made it abundantly clear to the Board that shareholders had serious concerns with the proposed plan for Red Lobster. Instead of honoring the wishes of shareholders and calling the Special Meeting, the Board decided it knew best and chose to completely ignore the will of Darden’s shareholders.”

On how the Red Lobster Sale confirms that there is tremendous value in Darden’s real estate:

“The Red Lobster Sale clearly demonstrates, however, that separating Darden’s real estate is feasible, and confirms that the approximately $4 billion estimate that we published for Darden’s real estate value was conservative. The $1.5 billion paid by ARCP is approximately in-line with the value that we estimated for Red Lobster’s real estate in our investor presentation dated March 31, 2014 (available at <http://tinyurl.com/March31-Investor-Presentation>) ...As we will detail in future presentations, we now believe the remaining real estate at Darden is worth approximately $2.5 to $3 billion, and opportunities still exist to create substantial value for shareholders by separating this real estate in a tax-efficient manner.”

On Starboard's plans going forward:

"We remain committed to our investment in Darden, and as disclosed today, have increased our ownership following the stock price decline related to the sale of Red Lobster. Although we remain extremely disappointed with the Red Lobster sale, we are excited by the prospect of a future for Darden under the direction of a newly constituted board of directors."

"In conjunction with certain of our highly qualified nominees, our group of advisors, and one of the leading operationally-focused consulting firms, we have identified (i) substantial cost reduction opportunities in the areas of food, labor, general and administrative, advertising, and other expenses, and (ii) meaningful opportunities to drive revenue through improved food quality, speed of service, and sales of high-margin food and alcohol items. Taken together, we believe all of these initiatives, if executed successfully, could yield substantial improvements in earnings, cash flow, and shareholder value."

On the need for Board change and Starboard's proposed nominees:

"While it has been clear for some time that some level of change would be required at Darden to increase and protect value for shareholders, this self-serving and value destructive Red Lobster Sale flies in the face of corporate democracy and has made it absolutely clear that the majority of Darden's current directors must be replaced at the Annual Meeting. Therefore, yesterday we delivered a letter to Darden nominating 12 highly qualified director candidates for election to the Board at the 2014 annual meeting of shareholders (the "Annual Meeting"). Although we reserve the right to make adjustments to the number of directors and composition of our slate, we have carefully selected a group of nominees with diverse skill sets in areas directly relevant to Darden's business, its current challenges, and its opportunities. Our director candidates collectively bring decades of restaurant experience, a proven ability to execute, financial acumen, and an unequivocal commitment to respect and represent the best interests of all shareholders."

"Importantly, included among our group of directors and advisors are several executives with direct experience leading Darden's most important concepts and overseeing similar turnarounds at competing casual dining companies. For example, one of our nominees, Brad Blum, along with our advisor Bob Mock, previously turned around Olive Garden at a time when many questioned the brand's relevance and future. They turned Olive Garden from a struggling chain with highly negative same-store-sales into a highly profitable, industry-leading concept that experienced 29 consecutive quarters of same-store-sales increases under their watch and grew AUV from approximately $2.5 million to $4 million. Separately, while at Brinker, Chuck Sonstebly saw a company with many of the same challenges that Darden faces today, and was instrumental in putting into place a plan that included the successful turnaround of restaurant operations, leading to both improved sales and a more than 300 basis point increase in margins, divesting of non-core brands, a significantly expanded franchising program both domestically and internationally, and the monetization of company-owned real estate for the benefit of shareholders. We believe experiences such as these will be invaluable to the new Darden board, and that the expertise and objectivity brought by our full group of nominees will be critical in implementing each aspect of our turnaround plan. Further, the consulting firm we have retained has implemented substantial turnarounds at numerous leading restaurant companies."
